

Light, Color and Darkness in North America for Furthering the Work of Liane Collot d'Herbois

Outlined below is information about the first two foundation courses in Light, Color and Darkness and registration form for the course in Denver. The foundation courses provide an excellent preparation for those interested in studying therapeutic painting and are a requirement for ongoing study. They can also be taken independently as a path of self-development.

These courses will be followed by two additional courses in which in addition to Light, Color and Darkness experienced through charcoal and color exercises, the seven-foldness and twelve-foldness of the human being will be studied. The third and fourth foundation courses will be offered in conjunction with the first sessions of the therapeutic painting program but may also be taken independently.

All courses will be taught in Denver, CO, Fair Oaks, CA, and Spring Valley NY.

Liane Collot d'Herbois, Artist and Originator of Painting Therapy out of Light, Color and Darkness

Liane Collot d'Herbois (1907-1999) built upon the color work of Goethe and Rudolf Steiner, emphasizing the creative forces of light and darkness in painting, both artistically and therapeutically. She showed how the result of the dynamic meeting of light and darkness is movement that manifests as visible color in a transparent color space. Through using the resulting laws of Light, Color, and Darkness one can move beyond subjectivity into a world of greater objective significance. Her early work with people of all ages showed her tremendous talent for seeing how constitution, temperament and illness can be revealed in one's paintings. By working closely with Ita Wegman and other physicians, she developed her insights into a Painting Therapy based on the foundation of Anthroposophy, demonstrating the direct connection and healing possibilities of Light, Color and Darkness to the human being on all levels. Her therapeutic insights and transformative paintings have inspired doctors, therapists, artists, and those seeking a connection with spirit all over the world.
